Thank you to everyone who supported 3GS's reverse advent calendar.

National Literacy Trust

We have long known that a love of reading and writing can help children flourish at school and go on to succeed at work. But latest research on the link between reading, writing and mental wellbeing tells us that reading and writing for enjoyment can also help children lead happy and healthy lives.

It has been found that children who enjoy reading and writing in their free time have significantly better mental well being than their peers who don't. Christine Clarke, Head of Research at the National Literacy Trust
